Success Story:

One of our big brothers was away for a year on military assignment. We knew that his little would miss the time that he spent with him. We had another big brother generously volunteer himself to fill in for the big brother that was away. So the little brother that was without a big brother for a year actually got to enjoy a 2nd big brother...and his little brother. So a new "family" of littles and bigs was formed.

The military assignment is now done, so everyone is within their own match. But both big brothers and both little brothers have vowed to get together once in a while to share activity time.
